FOREIGN.

ENGLAND.

THE CELTIC DISABLED.
Plymouth, December 30.—The steamer Gellert reports she spoke the steamer Celtic on 22d in latitude 41° longitude 04°. The Celtic's main shaft was broken, and she was proceeding under sail. The captain of the Gellert refused to tow the Celtic, owing to bad weather, but offered to take her passengers and mails, which was declined. As the gale was increasing the Gellert proceeded on her way, having ascertained that the Celtic was in a seaworthy condition and her human freight in no danger.

THE STEAMER ROSANA.

A MEETING PROHIBITED.

Dublin, December 30.—The lord-lieutenant has prohibited the projected national meeting at Cotehill.

A FLOATING THEATER.

The Grand Scheme Which Is to be Inaugurated on the Gladiator.
(New York Times.)

A startling innovation is to be introduced into the histrionic world in the shape of a floating theater company. A certificate was filed yesterday in the county clerk's office incorporating the company, of which the trustees are W. B. Stone, S. Conant Foster of the firm of Orls & Co., Ross C. Stone, Robert M. Fryer and Sydney Neergaard. The company's capital is placed at $1,000,000, to be divided into 100,000 shares. The first boat, designed by Mr. Fryer, is to be built on the catamaran principle, and the structure will be supported on two steel cylinders of 20 feet each. The dimensions will be 276 feet in length by 66 feet in width. The motive power will be a compound engine of 2,500 horse-power, while the draught will be 7½ feet, state-room accommodation for a company of 100 will be provided, while the seating capacity of the theater itself, including parquet and two balconies, will be for 1,500 people. The parquet is to be on the front of the vessel, taking up little more than one-third its length, and the stage will be in the middle. The engine-room, state-rooms, and dining-room and kitchen will occupy the after part. The boat is to be built, by contract in this city, and will cost $250,000. It is to rejoice in the title of the Gladiator. "We have the sympathy of some very eminent theatrical people," said one of the trustees last night. "I may say that they are enthusiastic on the subject. Our object is simply this: There are 2,000,000 people outside of New York and Brooklyn distributed in towns of from 10,000 to 20,000 inhabitants, who have no opportunities of witnessing a good performance without coming to the great cities. This is always inconvenient on account of the late return at night. Moreover, great actors will not go to small towns. Do you think Booth would play in Newark? He would possibly decline to do so. We shall visit such towns as Newport, Albany, Newark, Paterson, Stonington and Fall River, alongside the dock, and give them a first-rate performance, such as could never be heard in the ranch several miles behind. Here he remained until evening, when he coolly informed Tucker that he guessed there was no danger of his being apprehended, so he would resume his journey—he (Tucker) could return home. Captain and prisoner then parted company.

Tucker made his way to Rock Creek and telegraphed his employer that the ranch had been robbed. Knight was followed by officers, who finally arrested him near Fort Collins.

The Poetry of Texas Justice.

(Gatesville Advance.) Some useful instruction on the quality of our jury service, and the poetry of justice as ground out in this state can be gleaned from the Langford and Howard murder cases. Perry Langford and Vest Howard were indicted in this county for the murder of one Jones, said Jones having been deprived of life on a beautiful Sabbath evening while being fanned by the balmy breezes of the early spring time. Last year Perry Langford was tried, convicted and sentenced to a life term in the penitentiary, and is now there serving out his sentence. Last Saturday the jury in the Howard case returned a verdict of not guilty, and he walked from the court house of Coryell county a free man. The evidence in both cases was almost the same, the counsel was much the same, and the same judge presided in both cases. If one man was guilty the other was equally so, and if one was innocent the other is entitled to immunity from punishment. But Langford is in Huntsville, serving out a life sentence, while Howard is a free and honored citizen. Such is justice, but may the great Jehovah who governs the universe protect us from ever having to submit our life or liberty to a Texas jury.

Death of Joseph Longworth.

Cincinnati, December 30.—Mr. Joseph Longworth died at his home in Woodburn at 5 o'clock this morning. He was the son of the late Nicholas Longworth, who amassed great wealth in Cincinnati real estate. Jos. Longworth, since the death of his father, has been sole manager of Longworth, which he developed. He was seventy years old last October. His ailment was simply the breaking down of his vital energies. Several weeks ago he began to fail, and had been gradually sinking till the day of his death. He leaves a wife, a son, Judge Nicholas Longworth, and a daughter, the wife of Col. George Ward Nicholas. The funeral will be on Tuesday forenoon. Joseph Longworth has been very benevolent, and made frequent large donations to the city, chiefly for the promotion of the fine arts.

Wife Murderer Sentenced.

St. Louis, December 30.—James W. Cooke, who murdered his wife at Cave Springs, Mo., last November by holding her head beneath his knees and cutting her throat, was sentenced to ninety-five years in the penitentiary.

Collision and Wreck.

Cairo, Ill., Dec. 30.—The Wabash north and south-bound freight trains collided at Twentieth street today, badly wrecking both engines and two freight cars. Nobody hurt.

General Grant.

New York, December 30.—General Grant is greatly improved, although yet unable to sit up.

BRIDE OF A BISHOP.

A Southern Churchman Marries the Cattle Queen of Colorado.

Denver, December 29.—Bishop Warren of Atlanta, Ga., was married tonight at Evans Chapel to Miss Elizabeth S. Hill of this city. Bishop Simpson of Philadelphia uniting the two. Mrs. Hill is familiarly known as the cattle queen of the plains, she owning more cattle than any other party or corporation in the great West. John Hill, her husband, was for years known as the cattle king of Colorado. When he died, six years ago, he left his immense herd to his wife, who has since managed them in her own name, and since that time has doubled her wealth, until now her brands are known from Texas to Dakota. In cattle alone she is said to have a quarter of a million of his enemies. Then came the Karmatians and the Ishmaelians, or assassins, and the followers of Al Mecca and of Baba the Turkoman, and of many more; so that if Mohammed's thirty impostors have not already appeared and disappeared again, the mendi must surely be nearly the last of the series. If on the other hand, all the false prophets have come and gone, who is the mendi? It is but too probable that Islam, or at least a great part of it, will answer the question by proclaiming that Mohammed Aliud is the Messiah.

reign, too, of the Khalif al Mohdi, Hakeim Abu Hashem, called Al Mo-kanna, and well known as the Veiled Prophet of Khurasan, gained some successes, and might have gained more had he not despaired and committed suicide; and in the reign of Al Motassim the still more formidable pretender Babac was executed, but not until he had slain a quarter of a million of his enemies. Then came the Karmatians and the Ishmaelians, or assassins, and the followers of Al Mecca and of Baba the Turkoman, and of many more; so that if Mohammed's thirty impostors have not already appeared and disappeared again, the mendi must surely be nearly the last of the series. If on the other hand, all the false prophets have come and gone, who is the mendi? It is but too probable that Islam, or at least a great part of it, will answer the question by proclaiming that Mohammed Aliud is the Messiah.

Colored Men North and South.

(Chicago Herald.)

The New York theater which, having sold orchestra seats to a young mulatto, refused to admit him to the first floor, and offered to refund his money if he was not willing to go to the gallery, made a mistake, no doubt, but it will not injure its business. The man was so light-colored that the agent in the box office did not notice him, and the girl in his company was so fair that the faint trace of negro blood in her veins would scarcely be detected. They were both well-dressed and well-behaved, and there was no good reason why they should not have been admitted without parley to the seats which they had paid for. The doorman, however, directed them to go to that elevated resort, they demanded and received their money.

Among New York fashionables this episode will serve to command that particular temple of the drama to the patronage of the select. It is an evidence that its managers are above mere sordid considerations, and that, rather than have the social standard of their audiences lowered, they will refuse the money which persons not considered desirable associates for the elite may offer. It is hardly possible that the affair will give rise to criticism, or that the theater will in any way be attacked for unjust and harsh discrimination. Such things are of frequent occurrence at the North. Only last week a traveling company of negroes were unable to secure hotel accommodations in a Michigan town, and, in order to escape a night on the streets, they were compelled to ride in a freight car to another city. There may have been a gibe or two at the expense of the exclusive Michigan hotel-keeper, but the occurrence passed out of mind almost without serious comment in any quarter.

Suppose either of these things had happened in Atlanta or Mobile, or in Galveston? What would have been the character of Northern editorials and Northern conversations on these subjects? Everybody knows they would have been bitter in the extreme. Such discriminations occur in the South every day, of course. The colored man is confronted by them in politics, education, society and religion. But if in the North, where the colored race is immeasurably superior to their brethren of the South, and where the black man whenever he presents himself at a theater or a hotel is usually well dressed and fairly genteel in behavior, such injustice is the rule and not the exception, what is to be said against the people of the South, who have to deal with a much lower type of the African?

It is easy to prescribe rules and regulations for the government of others.
